Race Course

Course Description:

The Kingsport Cyclo-cross Cup is located at Domtar Park in Kingsport, Tennessee. The race will run in a clockwise direction, but will double back on itself in several places. The course will start on a gravel section (only used for the start) then turn left into a grass turn, and continue on grass. This will be the beginning of several technical sections, a series of short steep hills along the river which are rideable, then past a double pit which is located at the approximate center of the course. The course then continues on to another series of short ride/run-ups, and follows an old road bed to the tip of the island where it returns along the river on the other side, passing the pit for a second time, and crosses the only set of artificial barriers. The course then parallels itself on grass onto the pavement. The finish will be 150 meters after entering the paved stretch. Each lap is approximately 3.0 km in length and has approximately 15 feet of elevation gain. Due to the course being on an Island, in the Holston river and relatively level, it is a very fast course.
